

MORNING APPEAL.

THURSDAY.....MARCH 31, 1881

BURKE WINS.

Yesterday Judge Sullivan of the Supreme Court, decided on the numerous suits brought by Burke against the Bonanza Firm. Burke claimed a fraudulent conveyance of two feet of mining ground and that the resolutions ratifying the sale had not been passed by the unanimous consent of the stockholders. The Court decided in favor of Burke, holding very properly that a man's property cannot be sold without his consent, unless in satisfaction of an execution. This decision will compel the firm to pay over nearly a million dollars to its rightful owners, and will also have a very important bearing upon the rest of the suits which Burke has brought. The suits instigated by Burke have been in the Courts for some time and he has been subjected to considerable abuse by the press by reason of his litigations. It would seem, however, from the decision of Judge Sullivan, that he has claims which are capable of commanding respect. Burke, however, is considered a figurehead in the cases now pending, backed by the best legal talent in San Francisco combined with vast capital interests. In the suits the plaintiffs have gained every point and are slowly pressing the defendants to the wall. Even the vast wealth of the firm has been unable so far to prevent the slow grind of the judicial mill, and from the present outlook many million dollars will change hands before the end is reached.

The Boston and Albany Railroad Company furnishes its passengers with lunch baskets. Orders are taken by an agent on each train, and telegraphed forward to the station where the baskets are delivered. There are six bills of fare, and the uniform price is forty cents. One bill, for example, comprises two turkey sandwiches, two slices of buttered bread, two boiled eggs, and some pickles. The baskets have neat compartments, and are furnished with plates, knives, forks and napkins. Extras in the way of fruit, drinks, etc., can be ordered at reasonable prices. Why does not the Central Pacific adopt the plan, instead of allowing passengers to pay a dollar a meal all along the road for thin soup and pot soaked beef. The lunch basket system would be a big improvement on the Sacramento eating stand, where huns and coffee are retailed at fifty cents.

Marriott, of the air-ship fame, is still pegging away at the idea of aerial navigation. There were filed, on Wednesday, in the office of the Secretary of State, articles of incorporation of "Marriott's Aero-Plane Company," its avowed purpose being to "construct, equip, sell, own and work Marriott's Aero-Plane for navigating the air; to establish and maintain lines or regular services of aero-planes between any desired points, and to enter into contracts for the carriage, by said aero-planes, of mails, passengers and goods." The directors of the company are: Frederic Marriott, James Gibb, Joseph Tilden, Charles Kohler and Edward Curtis. Capital stock, $10,000,000.

A very nice little episode is thus related by the New York Sun: The proprietor of the hotel in Nice, where a gentleman and lady had taken rooms the preceding day, went up to the gentleman and, evidently embarrassed, stammered: "I beg pardon, sir, but I am extremely embarrassed. My hotel is, as you know, one of the most respectable in Nice—" "Well, what are you driving at?" "Why, sir, I must tell you, the lady with whom you came last night came here last November with one gentleman, returned here in December with another, and you must see that coming here so soon afterward with a third gentleman is rather—" "Oh! there is nothing wrong this time. I am her husband."

When the San Francisco Stock Report wishes to copy from the APPEAL it says: "A Nevada newspaper publishes the following." The Stock Exchange adopts a better and bolder plan. It takes the matter bodily and runs it as original. Its last scoop from the APPEAL was a whole column of original matter. These flattering attentions from two leading journals are fully appreciated in this office.

BOGUS BONES.

It has recently come to light that some conscienceless scamps in Rome are manufacturing mummies of the early Christian martyrs and selling them to American relic hunters at paying figures. Some of the old saints who figured prominently in the early history of the church have been received in New York and disposed of very readily. Mummies bring all the way from $100 to $1,000, if they are in a good state of preservation. It is claimed that a man on Fifth avenue paid $2,000 for an alleged cadaver of St. John, and subsequently discovered that it was right fresh from the manufactory. At first these imposters sold unidentified remains in the shape of skeletons, which they found no trouble in disposing of, and finally, emboldened by their success, began to give guarantees that the goods offered were the genuine relics of the saints. It was only when they began to sell old bones, which they claimed to be the remnants of the twelve apostles, that the buyers began to get uneasy, and on the heels of the general discontent the Pope thwarted the schemes of the imposters by announcing that no mummies had been taken from the catacombs for thirty years. The dealers, nothing abashed, claimed that they had tunneled into the ancient repository of the dead by a new route, and were pushing the cross-cut into the very richest portion of the mine. The police, however, discovered the factory where the mummies were made and closed down the works.

The expression "Don't crowd the mourners" originated with one of the Mier prisoners in Mexico. The captured Texans overpowered their guard at Rancho Salado and escaped, but were afterward recaptured and compelled to draw lots. A number of beans were placed in a hat, every tenth bean being a black one. The man who drew a black bean was to be executed next morning. One of the unfortunates who had already drawn a black bean was jostled, accidentally, by a fellow-captive who was crowding up to try his luck. The jostled party, whose fate was already sealed, laughingly remarked: "Go slow; don't crowd the mourners, boys."

Those who mourn over the corruption of politics in this country, may get some comfort from reading the result of an investigation at Canterbury, England. Out of 3,000 voters, 600 were bribed at prices ranging from $50 to $100 each. Some of the high dignitaries of the town took their coin like the poorest.

The Prince of Wales lately gave a dinner at Marlborough house to twenty-five intimate friends for the purpose of deciding on the merits of his new cook. The diners unanimously condemned the unfortunate culinary artist.

Quite a sensation has been occasioned in Eureka by the Rev Geo. W. Gallagher, who severed his connection with the Presbyterian Church last Sunday and joined the Unitarians.

An eastern publishing house has issued a slang dictionary. The compiler traces most of the slang back to Shakespeare. The rest originated in California and Nevada.

The Stockton Mail attributes the authorship of the inscriptions on the obelisk to Lucy Stone.

The APPEAL has just completed its eighteenth volume and there are lots more coming.
